40 YEARS OF LE NOUVEAU CHEF

About us

Real chefs don't cut corners. Not in the kitchen, not with their ingredients, and definitely not when it comes to what they wear. Since 1986, the most driven, relentless, and passionate chefs have chosen Le Nouveau Chef. And for good reason: it fits like a dream, looks sharp as ever, and is built to last, without trashing the planet.

When you choose Le Nouveau Chef, you're not just putting on a uniform. You're wearing the 'H,' a badge of honour. It's more than a logo, it's a mark that connects you to something greater: a global community of chefs who live and breathe their craft. We're all after the same thing, to push boundaries, to create better, and to keep raising the bar.

That 'H' has been our calling card for 40 years. A promise of quality, identity, and a refusal to settle for anything less. So suit up in chefwear that works with you, not against you. We've already made the right choices, so you can focus on what matters: the food, the craft, the passion.

How a Chef Jacket became a family

When I think back on the past years, I think of you, the chefs we sat down with. Sometimes literally, at the end of a long shift. Sometimes figuratively, during fittings, design sessions or meaningful conversations. What always strikes me is your openness and commitment. You showed us what works in the kitchen and what doesn't. And through those conversations, Le Nouveau Chef became what it is today: a family.

It started with one simple challenge. To create a chef jacket that fits, really fits. From that moment on, we began listening. To chefs, to their needs, their sense of style, their rhythm in the kitchen. And we haven't stopped listening since. No matter how much we've grown, everything still begins at the table. With attention. With a real conversation.

These 40 years are not just a celebration of our brand, but above all a celebration of everyone who wears it. A moment to reflect on the bond we've built together.

The 'H' on your shoulder is more than a logo. It's a mark of recognition. Of pride. Of belonging. Whether you've been a chef for decades or are just starting out: when you wear Le Nouveau Chef, you become part of the story. And that story continues. Not because we say so, but because you keep inviting us to the table. To think along. To build. And to evolve.

For that, I'm deeply grateful. Here's to the next chapters.

B Corp certified

A conscious choice for accountability. Since 2024, Le Nouveau Chef has been officially B Corp certified. This means we meet high standards in social impact, transparency, and responsible business practices. Not only are our products assessed, but our entire business model: from supplier selection and working conditions to governance structure and customer relationships.

The assessment is based on five areas: environment, workers, customers, governance, and community engagement. In our most recent assessment, Le Nouveau Chef achieved a total score of 111.1 points, well above the B Corp threshold of 80 points, demonstrating that we perform consistently across multiple areas. We scored above average in all five B Corp domains. To complete the B Corp certification, our social mission has been legally incorporated into our articles of association. This ensures that social value is structurally embedded in our decision-making. For us, B Corp is not an endpoint but a valuable mirror: it helps us remain critical and further embed the values that have defined us since 1986: quality, responsibility, and transparency into our organization.

The style of a visionary

At first glance, it may seem like a simple story. But those who truly know Le Nouveau Chef, understand that its origins are shaped by intuition, elegance and courage, just like the chef jackets that made the brand renowned.

It all began with Robert ten Hoope, shaped by the refined taste of his mother and the entrepreneurial mindset of his father. His mother had the eye of a couturier: precise, uncompromising, and always attentive to detail. His father was a strategist and a sharp marketer who knew how to turn an idea into reality. What Robert saw was this: style isn't something you wear, it's something you express.

The charm of detail

Robert ten Hoope never followed the rules. Long before Le Nouveau Chef became a brand, he worked with the flair of a designer and the persistence of a salesman. He travelled across the country with stacks of table linen, knocking on doors of restaurants from Texel to Maastricht.

His approach was different and creative. Instead of showing fabric samples, he presented them as if they were menus like a fine dining experience. From the beginning, he demonstrated that experience came first. Every detail mattered. Not because it had to, but because it made sense.

That attention evolved into a vision. One day, he met a female chef whose jacket didn't fit her at all. Just like his mother in the 1950s, she was forced to wear ready-made garments that didn't adapt to her form. Robert tailored a chef jacket for her. That moment marked the birth of Le Nouveau Chef, not as a brand, but as a solution.

What followed was a stream of new ideas: lighter fabrics, refined compositions, fits designed for real chefs. Tailored performance for the kitchen. Above all, garments that made chefs feel seen and respected.

Bound by craftsmanship

What sets Le Nouveau Chef apart is the sense of family woven into every seam. Robert didn't build a client base, he built a family. He didn't dress chefs for today, but for their future.

“A good chef jacket
is like a good knife.
You need to trust it.”

– Robert ten Hoope

Madelon ten Hoop
Co-owner

FOUNDER'S STORY

Chefs like Cas Spijkers, Maartje Boudeling, Jonnie Boer and Sergio Herman wore Le Nouveau Chef long before they became famous. Robert recognised talent, not status. And that feeling, being truly seen, still lives on in every design and in every interaction with the people who wear our garments. Le Nouveau Chef became more than a label. It became a signature, visible in every stitch and felt in every connection. Whether it's a five-star hotel or a student chef in training, the relationship is personal and the standard remains high.

Robert noticed trends, but rarely followed them. He worked with fabrics no one else dared to use at the time, like flame-retardant blends, Modal, or lightweight polycotton. He designed chef jackets with fabric weighing just 210 g/m², long before 'lightweight' became a norm, a detail that makes a difference every single day.

A new generation

When Madelon ten Hoop and Paul van Luipen joined the company, Robert stepped aside. He called it "the right decision, when decisions are made by heart, there's often truth in them." Just like he had always done with chefs, he now gave the next generation the stage. Le Nouveau Chef shifted focus to deepening the brand's fashion identity, giving style a greater role. Not to impress, but to help chefs express who they are. Paul and Madelon brought clarity and directed the spotlight even more towards chefs as individuals with a story.

Today, 40 years later, Le Nouveau Chef remains true to its beginnings. To the table where it all started. To the people who wear it. And to the legacy of its founder, who never saw style as the goal, but as the means.

Le Nouveau Chef was born from a need for more care, personal style and warmth. It showed that good design starts by listening. That style begins with respect. And that the real revolutions live in the details no one sees, but everyone feels.

Forty years on, this is still present in every fibre, in every fit, and in the subtle 'H' on the shoulder: a badge of honour every chef wears with pride and a lasting tribute to our founder.

Made for everyday use

We work with European fabric suppliers to develop fabrics that meet our standards for lasting quality. We continuously explore durable options that balance comfort and performance. Every fabric is selected with attention to quality and longevity, a process of ongoing refinement.

Before a fabric enters our collection, it is thoroughly tested and washed. We ensure that each material offers breathability, comfort and durability so every garment maintains the signature Le Nouveau Chef look.

Organic & Fairtrade Cotton

Organic cotton is produced and certified to organic agricultural standards. The production sustains the health of soils, ecosystems and people by using natural processes rather than artificial inputs. Organic cotton farming does not allow the use of toxic chemicals, like pesticides, or genetically modified organisms.

Recycled PET-Polyester

With this method Plastic bottles, made from PET, are recycled into Polyester. This is a source of plastic that would otherwise go to landfill and would create pollution. During the process it causes less air, water and soil contamination compared to the use of non-recycled polyester.

Tencel

TENCEL® is a sustainable produced fibre made of Eucalyptus wood which is extracted from responsible managed forests with official FSC certification. The solvent used during the production of TENCEL® is recycled by almost 100%. TENCEL® received the 'European award for Environment' from the European Union for their unique production process.

Linen

Our linen, produced and sourced in Europe, comes from the flax plant, which requires less water and fewer chemicals than cotton. This natural fiber absorbs moisture well, maintains temperature, and is perfect for busy kitchens. Linen is strong, feels premium with its texture, resists excessive wrinkling when properly treated, and is biodegradable.

Produced in Europe

All of our chef clothing and catering uniforms are manufactured in Europe, ensuring compliance with European labour laws, including fair wages and safe working conditions. We visit our production facilities on a regular basis to verify that conditions meet the required standards for workers' welfare. Manufacturing within Europe also reduces emissions associated with long-distance transportation.

High-Performance materials

We source high-performance materials, such as recycled fibres and organic cotton. Designed for heavy use, our fabrics are carefully selected for their proven ability to withstand frequent washing and the high temperatures of professional kitchen environments. To extend the lifespan of the garments and reduce the frequency of replacement, we recommend following the care instructions we provide.

Timeless designs

Our collection is designed to be mixed and matched, allowing each crew member to show their personal style while still looking unified as a team. With a consistent colour palette and a focus on timeless designs, our clothing is made to last beyond seasonal trends.
